

CLIMATE ACTION IN FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS INITIATIVE

Voluntary Principles for Mainstreaming Climate Action within Financial Institutions

ALIDE – Latin American Association of Development Financing Institutions as a Partner Network of the Initiative

About the Initiative

www.mainstreamingclimate.org

The Climate Action in Financial Institutions Initiative is a coalition of public and private financial institutions around the globe aiming to systematically integrate climate change considerations across their strategies, programs and operations. Guided by 5 voluntary principles, the initiative aims to make climate change considerations a core component of how financial institutions conduct business, parallel to and in addition to the necessary development of appropriate regulatory and enabling environments at the domestic and international levels.

The Secretariat of the initiative is managed by the Institute for Climate Economics (I4CE) – an initiative of Caisse des Dépôts & Agence Française de Développement, headquartered in Paris, France.

The Five Voluntary Principles:

- Principle 1: COMMIT to Climate Strategies
- Principle 2: MANAGE Climate Risks
- Principle 3: PROMOTE Climate Smart Objectives
- Principle 4: IMPROVE Climate Performance
- Principle 5: ACCOUNT for your Climate Activities
